> Others making grimaces at us. The groans and screams of the dying were terrible. I went in with an attendant and we got one man. Just as we were leaving I saw another and was about to grab him when he rushed back in the midst of the flames and smoke and to his doom. I was almost suffocated. I then went around with the attendant to another room, and we got one man out half dead and another dead, suffocated. I went around to the north side of the building and saw five or six jumping up before the wind.ows of the bui'd ing. Two of Denny's men and J. go an axe, this was in the first story, and we succeeded in breaking through two sets of bars and rescued two more men. I then secended the ladder to the second story, and after working twenty min-utes got a loole through. This room contained a Frenchman. He worked like a gian,t in helping me to break the windows open. I got him out and then myself and two or three others went into the hall and found one man dead. OH, IT WAS TERBIBLE!

Groans, shrieks and demoniac laughter are ringing in my ears yet.' This man's story is but the reflex of hundreds of others. The efforts to remove patients, especially the violent, were thwarted by mad obstinacy and the lives lost were mainly due to this. A few, in their removal succeeded in escaping, carrying conster-nation to the people of the town but most were safely housed in barns and other vacant buildings. Of those who escaped it is believed, all have been recaptured. Several were found badly frozen, amputation of limbs being necessary in one or two cases. THE PATE OF ONE POOR MANUAC. who was literally roasted alive, fairly illustrated the terror of the scene. He occupied a room in the third story of the wing where the fire started As the flames crept up to his living grave, he stood peering through the bars of his window with the seeming coolness and fortitude of a martyr.
